Tourist Park Cabins now more affordable

Tourist & Caravan parks across the country are seemingly defying the global financial crisis, with consumers turning in droves to more affordable and family friendly holiday adventures.

This trend has seen a dramatic increase in caravan park owners replacing old van sites allowing them to increase both their overnight and permanent tourist and park home accommodation.

Campac, a leading manufacturer of park homes and cabins is ensuring they keep pace with both the market demands, and trends.

“Over the last 6 months we have researched and worked directly with many caravan park owners and managers to find out what they are really looking for in their park cabin accommodation requirements, and the results of this research have helped us improve our existing range, and introduce many new designs to the marketplace” says Nigel Martin, Campac’s Tourist Park Cabin specialist consultant.

“Most park owners are now looking for durability, modern design, increased comfort for their clients, but also most importantly low maintenance” says Nigel.

Campac has traditionally built using modular sandwich panel foam construction. This product provides superior insulation properties, but also has the added advantage of long term operational life requiring virtually no maintenance. However, over the last 12 months they have also expanded into steel frame construction offering a variety of external and internal finishes. By introducing new construction methods and products, Campac has been able to create cabin products that remain durable and cost effective, yet are also aesthetically appealing, and offer occupants a very comfortable and homely environment to stay.

Campac’s range does not just end with Tourist park cabins – “We pride ourselves on offering Tourist park operators a full construction service for all their requirements. That includes site ensuites, amenities and ablution buildings, camp kitchens, recreation rooms, and even laundry facilities. Campac also offer permanent residential homes specifically designed for holiday and retirement homes. Because we construct in factory, and then deliver completed modular buildings to site, our site works and installation process is very low impact, therefore offering minimal disruption to the operation of tourist parks” says Jason van Hooft, General Manager of Campac.

“We don’t class ourselves as a transportable builder, rather a factory built construction company. The main difference between us and traditional relocatable or transportable home builders, is although we build off site and transport the buildings in modular form, the finished building is of far superior quality to most on site built dwellings because of our factory control systems” says Jason.

Campac is a quality assured company, operating out of state of the art manufacturing facilities based in Yatala between Brisbane and the Gold Coast. They operate under the strictest quality control systems ensuring all buildings are completed to the highest standard. They also offer a full turn key solution to clients, being able to design, construct, install, and even assist with council planning and approval requirements.
