Stunning new range of Factory Built Homes

Campac Australia, one of Queensland's leading factory built home manufacturers has launched its latest range of stunning new homes – the “Metro Range”.

Since the recent launch of their new country series homes, the design team has been hard at work creating a metropolitan range of homes to match the traditional building market. The result is the stunning new “Metro” range.

“Our aim is to not just provide an alternative to traditional home designs, but a design and product which set us apart from what is considered the norm for transportable homes – and not just match but exceed traditional on site built home designs” says Jason van Hoof, General Manager of Campac.

“We don’t want to be known as a transportable home builder, but rather a quality factory built home manufacturer – and there is a big difference between the two.” says Jason.

The market perception of a transportable home is something that is trucked in, put on blocks and can be again relocated in the future. Campac’s product is very different to this.

Matt Martin, Campac’s senior housing consultant says “We manufacture homes in a factory environment, then deliver to site in modules, which are placed on permanent footings. The end result is a product similar to a traditional built home, but with some truly unique advantages”

One of those advantages is a higher quality product, as Campac operate under a strict Quality Assurance program so every home leaves the factory in the highest quality possible. Another advantage is build time, as the homes are built in one location, in all weather facilities, meaning no delays in construction, and much easier access for suppliers and contractors to work on the project.

“We are very excited about the future of this new product range, but we are also not stopping here. On the drawing board are two new ranges including a Coastal Series, and a unique Hillside Series designed specifically to deal with sloping land in a much more cost effective way than traditional building methods” says Matt.
